Aspiring Full Stack Developer

MAIN IDEA

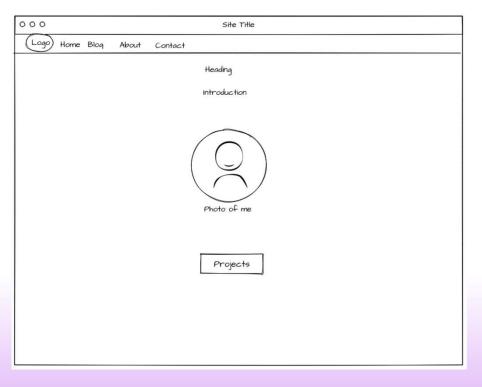

Currently studying at Coder Academy to become a Full Stack Developer.

SITE MAP

CONCEPT

- I wanted the design to be simple but eye catching
- Using dull colours but making sure the important stuff stood out, picture of myself, my projects button, that navigation page
- When someone clicks on your website you want to be drawn immediately to what its about, my introduction are small but also the main headline of the page. Immediately you know my name, what I look like and what I am about all within a couple seconds
- The look is centered to look more aesthetically pleasing.
- The first page sets the tone of the rest of the website so you need it to be informative and not too cluttered. I used my own personal preference on how I like websites, cluttered websites take away from the important information or can even cause and overwhelming feeling.

TARGET AUDIENCE

I did the one thing your not supposed to do, work from desktop down to mobile, but a lot of people who are looking at your portfolio or website especially when its very job centric they will use their computer. So if I made sure that my website looked good on computer I could use @media in CSS to create a new layout if needed too. However my website was quite responsive when you looked on mobile the only thing that needed tweaking was the navigation bar.

The rest was easy, I knew what I wanted my viewer to see and used that to an advantage. I understand that lots of people browse on their mobile however when it comes to apply for positions usually desktop or even MAYBE a tablet is their go too.

BLOG WEBPAGE

Because this was a website about me and who I am I picked something I was passionate about to put down as a blog post which is why I chose Japan. This was mostly just I could showcase my blog creating skills, I enjoyed making my gaming website as this is what I did, was create blogs based on something I was passionate about and this mockup blog site was the first thing I wanted to build

BLOG CONCEPT

I knew what I liked to see in a blog but I still did some research on how others have their laid out and got some ideas from that concept.

Each blog post your able to highlight the heading as well as the section that says read more. Both of which change colour and cursor so that the person reading this blog knows that they can click on it to read more about the blog post.

It is such a simple function but the way it works is very eye catching.

```
.blog-text .read-more:hover{
| color: □#f33c3c;
| transition: all ease 0.3s;

ABOUT ME

Sticking with the classic dull grey look I used white to highlight the most important parts of the page, my hobbies, the tech stack I am familiar with and my working experience. The less important stuff is in black as like an extra bit of information but the highlights of this page are set up. My favorite part about this page are the box shadows on the picture and the 3 boxes at the bottom. It really adds a whole other element to the boxes and make them really catch your eye. This one was a lot of information to put into a page but it is an about me page so I wanted to express who I am.

.columns{
    flex: auto;
    border: □black solid 1px;
    margin: 10px;
    box-shadow: 2px 2px 5px □black;
    background-color: ■white;
}

About Me

I am a home lending specialist working at CBA wanting to break into the tech world. I started my first coding experience in 2018 and have not been able to stop myself from dabbling until I became serious and joined Coder Academy.

Since beginning my journey I've created 3 websites, one was a gaming website called "Now Loading" where I used to write and create content based on the news coming out about up and coming games. Once I was comfortable with that I began creating shopify websites mostly for myself so I could learn about passive income and also further develop my skills because of COVID lots of people were using shopify to create their own stores and I wanted to learn.

I was mostly self taught, finding anyway I could to learn different ways to code, I used Harvards CS50 course as well to attend lectures, then kept up with Codecademy. Now I am here, eager to learn and ready to put the skills I have learned to the test

I am a very vanilla developer, like most I enjoy gaming. My favorite game at the moment is Destiny 2 since the new DLC came out I have been obsessed with playing it. Apart from that I enjoy spending time with my partner and my dog Leo.

I am so obsessed with problem solving, or learning how things work, I know we live in a world where everything changes so I welcome the challenge of not knowing everything but knowing that I will never run out of things to learn

ABOUT ME CONCEPT

The concept for this one was a bit harder to try and work out what I wanted, there were 2 things I know it needed to have, one was a picture of myself and the second was information about myself but I didn't know how I was going to go about it. I created my about me passage first so I knew how much text I was working with and worked around it, once the picture and the about me text was up I was missing something, and I added the last 3 boxes to give the page a bit more character, its an about me page so I wanted to highlight my hobbies, my tech experience and my previous professions.

CONTACT

Contact was a very simple thought process, I wanted my contact details, my resume and my social media links up there. The picture was mostly a filler for the page but what really draws your attention on this page is the RED Resume button that has a link to my actual resume. Then the social media links are the next thing you notice. The look of this webpage very much followed suit from the first one. I did however search online for button ideas as I felt like it was important to highlight the resume on this page so I needed something bright and eye catching for the button.

C O N T A C T C O N C E P T

The concept with this webpage was mostly how simple can I make it, this is not supposed to be cool or fancy or anything just a simple design that is very straight to the point and that's why its very minimal. The rest of my website it there to showcase my abilities etc but this was mostly just a placeholder for my social media links and my resume.
